Ty Howard's In-Depth Preparation

- Ty keeps his speaking schedule at approximately 70 speaking engagements per year to give himself the time, energy, and motivation to stay on the cutting edge with his content, and to research his clients properly.

Pre-Speech / Program Presentation Preparation

- Ty's Pre-Program Questionnaire (PPQ) is the focal point around which he is able to customize his presentation to the client's specific needs. Here's how Ty uses it:
 - He visits the client's website and prints out relevant information.
 - Then Ty makes his first client call to discuss the PPQ and the client's expectations and to design the first rough draft of slides.
 - Ty gets the meeting program agenda to see if key executives are speaking before him. If so, Ty asks for copies of the executives' speeches so he can build key points/phrases into his program.
 - He then e-mails tentative program slides based on the first PPQ call and his research above.
 - Ty then makes his second client call to go over his slides and presentation.
 - Ty e-mails his handout materials to the client to distribute during his program to be used as a reference and continual learning tools after his presentation.
 - Ty conducts an on-site meeting (at the actual meeting or event location) with the client in the evening before or the morning prior to his presentation for any current information on what's happening at the meeting.
 - For half-day or greater programs, Ty does field research by visiting the client's business location.
- Ty is always accessible; returns calls quickly, and is patient, even with demanding clients.

Ty Howard's In-Depth Preparation

At The Speech / Program Presentation

- Ty is well-prepared.
- He checks out the venue and meeting room in advance.
- He sticks to the time schedule.
- He respects the audience – does not talk down to them, etc.
- Ty is down-to-earth and approachable with clients (not a prima donna).
- His highly interactive, entertaining speaking style with strong content is practical and immediately useable by audience members.
- Ty DOES NOT sell products or services from the platform without client permission and then for only about one minute.

Post-Speech Follow-Up

- Ty believes that building successful long-term relationships with a client depends as much on what he does after his presentation as on the presentation itself. Here are some of his key follow-up strategies:
 - A thank you letter is sent to the meeting planner.
 - Our professional business office team at InspiraGen Institute will take any feedback and ensure your experience with Ty is up to and beyond your expectations.
 - Ty will call to follow up on any potential future speaking engagements, training, or consulting opportunities discussed at the event with management or the meeting planner.
